Using a Reacting to the Past role-playing game, this interactive class involves students taking historical roles to meet, negotiate, deliberate, debate, and lead real-life scenarios.

Sometimes the best way to understand the past is to pretend to go there. Using a role-playing game, this interactive 8-week course asks students to recreate a crucial moment in the history of the civil rights movement. The class involves students playing historical roles to meet, negotiate, deliberate, debate, and lead real-life scenarios at the height of the US civil rights movement in 1963. Where will the next protest take place? What kind of tactics will the Movement pursue? How important is non-violence and direct action? Should change be pursued in the courts or the streets? Is the government an ally or the enemy? In this course, you will collectively seek answers to these questions, while learning about the history of this important social movement.

Pace-C 300 Issues in PACE: Evolution/Creation Controversy in Mod Amer (3 cr.)

Class # 30204 2:30 – 3:45 PM MW, SB220 Carl Weinberg
